AUTUMN 2026

ISSUE 01

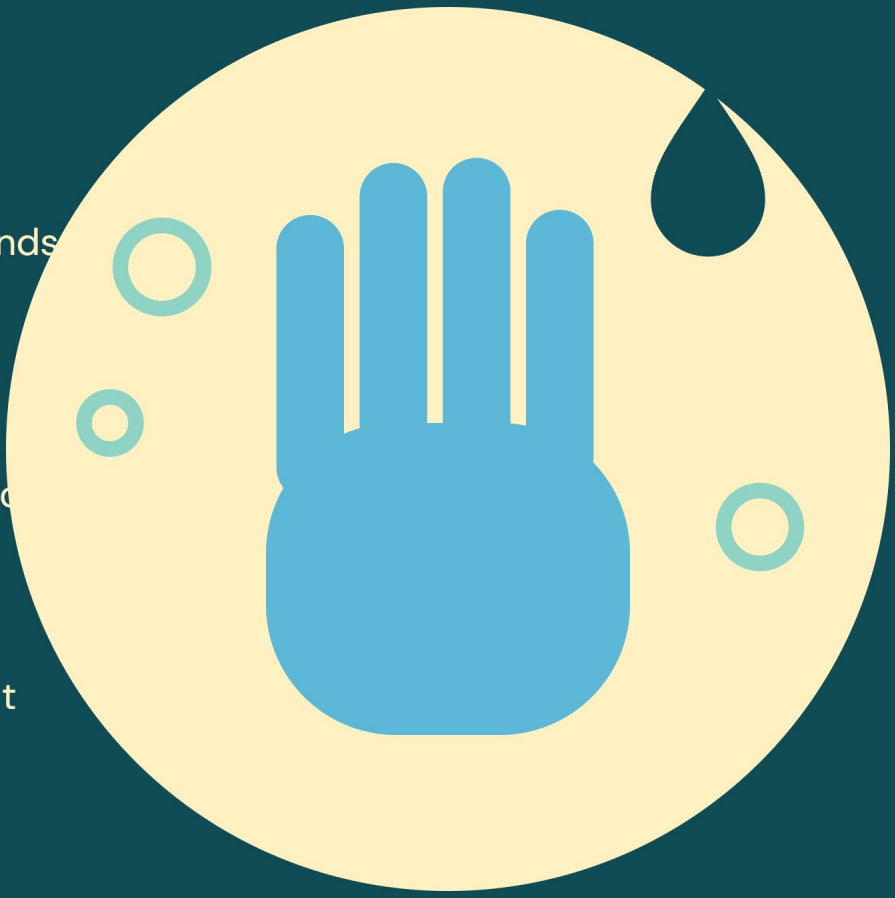

HANDS MATTER

INSIDE

Your twenty-second routine
Four steps that keep hands clean

A Monday morning, illustrated
A field note from a schoo basin

Three moments a day
When clean hands count most

clean hands, every day

[YOUR LOGO]

ABOUT THIS MAGAZINE

Small habits, shared spaces.

Clean hands are a routine, not a ritual. They need only soap, clean water and a few seconds.

Hands Matter looks at how that routine plays out in real places: at the basin, at the tap, and in the small gaps where a habit quietly breaks down.

Inside you will find a simple four-step routine, the three moments that matter most, and an imagined Monday morning at a primary school.

Change begins with a habit, and a habit begins with a conversation.

[EDITOR NAME], Editor
[YOUR ORGANISATION]

WHY WASH YOUR HANDS?

Clean hands are not just about you. They are about everyone you touch, feed and share a space with.

1. It stops germs travelling from hands to food, faces and surfaces.
2. It protects you and the people around you.
3. It takes only twenty seconds.
4. It needs only soap and clean water.
5. It builds a habit that lasts.
6. It keeps shared spaces cleaner for everyone.

THE ROUTINE

Your twenty-second routine

Four steps, one routine. Keep the scrubbing to at least 20 seconds.

1

Wet

Wet your hands with clean water.

2

Lather

Apply soap and lather well.

3

Scrub 20 seconds

Every surface: backs of the hands, between the fingers and under the nails.

4

Rinse and dry

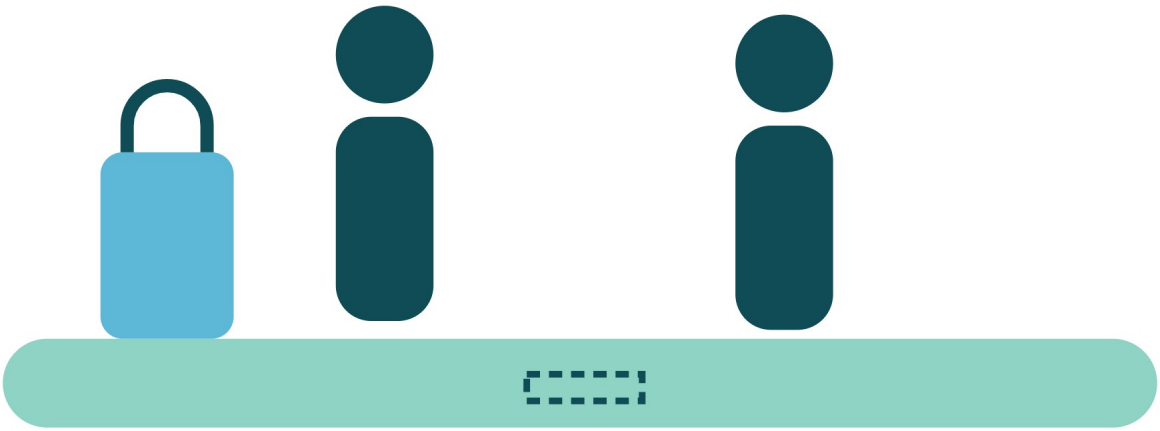

Rinse the soap away and dry your hands.

THREE MOMENTS A DAY

After the toilet. Before eating. Before cooking.

FIELD NOTE

A Monday morning, illustrated

Soap dish: empty

An imagined scene. The people are invented.

At a primary school, a teacher fills the bucket by the tap before the first bell. The water runs. By Tuesday, the soap dish is empty again, and nobody has been told who should refill it.

OUR MISSION

[YOUR ORGANISATION] is dedicated to making clean hands an everyday routine in the places where people gather, learn and eat.

OUR VISION

A world where clean hands are simple, shared and never forgotten.